An authentic haven for nature lovers, Saiwa Swamp National Park is nature’s private reserve. The quiet swamp waters beneath the boardwalk set amidst the swirling reeds and bulrushes is home to the rare and endangered semi-aquatic Sitatunga antelope and a realm for the rare De Brazza monkey. Within this tropical wetland and mosaic of riverine forest, sedges and acacia woodlands, with fringing dense rushes and grass beds, bird life is abundant. The park offers an interesting mix of forest and swamp vegetation and extraordinary diverse plant habitat.

Definitely calm and serenity as you down the boardwalk isle. Enjoy distinct sights, sounds and the heartbeat of the wild. The bird menu is diverse and exceptional and birders will ultimately be spoilt. Be on the lookout for the lesser jacana, grey heron and the African Black Duck. The forest shelters the Narina trogons, collared and orange-tufted sunbird, yellow bishop, Hatlaub’s marsh widow bird and the Noisy Ross’s turacos.

The park harbors and protects its resident Sitatunga antelope population that is uniquely adapted for the wetland environment. Look out for the nocturnal potto who are relatives of the bush baby, spotted-nosed otters, giant forest squirrels, colobus monkey, bush bucks and duiker.

Tree Top Hut is a great accommodation choice for honeymooners who just want to get away from everything and everybody as they lay their foundation on a great new chapter of their lives. Enjoy camping under a starry wild night and picnicking if you just want to be in the park for just a day trip.
